New York's Social Agency.

New York is in the throes of a social agency of which the outcome is as yet obscured in doubt and danger. There stood the old Academy of Music with its triumphs and defeats, about all the temple of song of its ambitious proportions that New York could stand up to. It was open to anybody who could pay his way in, but bloated aristocrats had the places that were worth having in a strictly society sense, and other people, quite as bloated and desirous of being quite aristocratic, longed for a temple of their own. There was room enough for common people, but to be anybody one must have "a box at the opera" after the foreign fashion, and in the metropolis of the republic foreign fashion rules.

That there might be more boxes and a goodly number of ordinary people to look at the people in them, the then aspiring money bags built the Metropolitan Opera House and prepared to be happy. "Man never is, but always to be blessed." Before there was a performance there was wrangling. Everybody could not get the best places. Here was a box which gave a splendid view of the stage; the melody of sweet sounds could be wafted to it in a breeze; but sitting there it was impossible to see, and equally impossible to be seen by, everybody in all the other boxes. If these complaints be well-founded we have here the utter failure of the new opera house; for to fail in a society sense is to be an utter ruin. Men and women who have money and want "recognition" can't be expected to be happy when their money has gone out for nothing but music, which can as well be had at a dollar a head. What they are going to do about it remains to be seen.

It seems a pity for these people that social recognition can't be bought as they buy their hams and eggs and truffles and bogs French wines. Wealth increases rapidly and enormously in New York. The whole country is tributary to the metropolis. Elegant residences multiply, "shoddy" folks are elegancies of life to which they are not accustomed, and are willing to give sumptuous entertainments to those who can teach them. But the folks who get rich a few years earlier look coldly on the new comers in the realm of gold, and harsh rebuffs meet their gentle advances. It is a sad plight for fashionable folk, and no man can foretell the end thereof.

Afraid of Itself.

One of the Democratic newspapers are making great nervousness over the "shoddy" contest, now soon to be fought out. Mr. Randall is feared because he is a Pennsylvania man and has been rated a protectionist. Mr. Carlisle is feared because he is a free trader and it is thought unwise for the party to "give itself away." Mr. Cox is feared because he is a joker, and this is no joking matter.

In behalf of Mr. Randall it should be said that no man is more ready to accommodate himself to the situation. He is understood to have found standing room on the tariff plank of the Ohio platform, and that is not protectionist enough to hurt the feelings of a free trader who is at the same time a politician. Mr. Carlisle has said—and said it boldly—that he is not for sweeping away protection all at once. He would probably put as much pressure as his party's traffic in votes would bear. Mr. Cox is a free trader as well as a joker, but it isn't every politician who can give him points in the profession to which he has devoted himself with considerable success.

Either of these gentlemen would be able to handle the party with a good deal of ease, but the party is afraid of all of them and at this time there are no other formidable candidates. The chief trouble with the Democratic party is that it is afraid to trust itself in a session of Congress immediately before a presidential election. It wants the President and the presidential patronage, and it desires to reduce to a minimum the danger of blundering away its chance to get its nose into the crib. This is why it eyes its great men with suspicion, and starts at shadows.

PERSONAL.

Bob Ingersoll's middle name is Green. Perhaps that's the reason he thinks he will never burn.—New York Journal.
"Protection benefits one and cheats twenty," says Mr. Beecher, and then he goes and votes the Republican ticket. If there is a daisy blooming anywhere in the pulpit of America, Henry is that flower.—Courier-Journal.

State Senator James Gay Gordon, of Pennsylvania, has married Miss Kate LeCompte Woolson, adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Snook, of Alexandria, Virginia, and courier of Governor Pattison, of Pennsylvania. Mr. Gordon is a young lawyer of Philadelphia.

Hon. Geo. Blackburn, of Kentucky, told a reporter the other day: "Carlisle will be elected. I am a Presbyterian; I believe in predestination, predestination, the perseverance of the saints, and that whatever is to be will be, whether it ever happens or not, and I tell you Carlisle will be elected. He ought to be elected, you see, and I think he will be."

The last Connecticut Legislature acted a law requiring every dealer in oleomargarine to post conspicuously in his place of business the sign: "Oleomargarine for sale here." In letters not less than four inches long. Certain dealers in Hartford have been caught breaking the law in spirit by the display of signs in which the letters are of the prescribed length, but so attenuated that they can be read only with the aid of a magnifying glass.

THE WHISPERING GALLERY.

The sudden taking off of John Osterling, an intelligent mechanic who became the head of a great industrial establishment and one of Wheeling's most prominent business men, recalls a conversation I had the other day with an old resident about early times in Wheeling. There are other Wheeling people whose minds go back to one Thatcher, for many years a manufacturer of chairs in this city. Before he became a manufacturer he was a plain chair-maker. Thatcher came to Wheeling about the year of grace 1816. He was an easterner, and thought he saw here a good opening for business in his line. He had a little ready money, and fixing upon a lot on which he desired to build he went to Noah Zane, the magnate of the time, and proposed to buy the ground. "I may as well tell you, sir," said Zane, "that Wheeling is an aristocratic town, and I own it, and I won't sell a foot of ground to any d—d mechanic." Thatcher found a spot where Washington Hall now stands. Some time after Zane, who was a liberal liver and not very provident, was sued for a debt of $300 in gold. Judgment was against him. And now he was in a fix.

You may remember that gold was a scarce commodity in Wheeling in those days. You may also remember that we used to imprison for debt. The Sheriff went for Zane and put it to him squarely: "Your money or your body." "You don't mean to say that you are going to put me in jail?" "That is what I have to do unless you pay the money." That is the law. "Why, there isn't that much gold in Wheeling," protested the debtor. "The official held until the Sheriff exhibited a brilliant thought. 'Well, if anybody has that much gold it is that Yankee chairmaker,' said the Sheriff. 'All right, let's go down and see him.' And down they went. Zane made known his business, and exclaimed, 'Yes, I've got that much gold, but I won't lend a dollar of it to any d—d aristocrat.'—Zane saw the connection and protested that he didn't want to go to jail. 'I won't lend you a dollar of it, but I will give you $300 in gold for that piece of ground,' Zane got the money and the Yankee chairmaker got the ground. Early Wheeling was not in love with manufacturers. How shortsighted we are sometimes!

I am deeply interested in the coming Bazaar of Nations "for sweet charity's sake"—so are lots of other people. Don't you think it is beautiful to see our ladies devoting themselves as zealously to the poor, who are always with us, than the scale of admission fees? And do you think the ladies will kindly furnish every visitor with a private "lightning calculator"? Punch, conch or punch with a ss. A slice trip for a five cent fare. A pink trip for a three cent fare. A boat trip for a one cent fare. A walk in the presence of the president. Fifty cents strikes a good many as a bad stroke of policy. The entertainment will doubtless be worth that much—I would give fifty cents for a seat on the Bazaar, but the idea of the Bazaar is to make sales, and that presupposes customers. But let us hope that it will all come right.

Speaking of the Bazaar—tell me why it is that women usually make a success of a thing of this kind? The other day I was at one of the general meetings of the ladies (they didn't recognize me) and for the life of me I couldn't tell how they reached any conclusions. But they went ahead, a third of them talking at once, and each seemed to understand it all. Women have some points of superiority over men.

When the Madison Square "Hazel Kirke" company was in the city the manager told me a pretty good story at the expense of a Pittsburgh dude. It may not be true, but it is just as good as if it were. While the company was there, the manager stood at the door one evening, and a full fledged Sanky City came up with an "Ab, good even." "Good evening, sir," said the manager. "I suppose you admit reprehensible of the Maudie and Duana?" "Certainly, sir, why not?" "Ah, very kind; thanks, awfully." And the representative of M. & D. passed on. "Ah, by the way," the manager called after him, "don't you want some news for your paper?" "Be awfully obliged, my dear sir, truly." And he took out a Russia buckled note book. "Suppose you put down first," the cruel manager suggested, "that the paper you represent suspended publication three weeks ago." "With great deliberation the journalist dude folded up his note book, pocketed his pencil and with a flower look, went off to work his scheme on some other manager.

I was sitting in the lobby of the Bazaar Branch of Council the other evening, and in looking over the heterogeneous mass of humanity composing that body I was struck particularly with the appearance of a Scotch warld man, and the citizens of that ward are to be congratulated on having so efficient a member as Dr. Jepson. Always careful and methodical in what he may say or how he may vote, a good reasoner and thinker, and an every requisite of a safe member. I've sometimes thought he ought to have chosen the law as his profession. I believe if he had he would have been a good mark in the political arena, and even now I should not be surprised to see him in the future brought more prominently to the front.

In a London paper which deals largely with Mary Anderson—"Our Mary"—I read that she makes no calls and receives none "without the presence of the family." You may stake your patrimony on the truth of that statement. Septhar Griffin is in himself a numerous and honorable family, as many young fellows will tell you who regard old man Griffin as an ogre. But Mary continues to coin shakels. Perhaps you don't know that she has been a Wheeling man's wife if it is that she had inclined.

And there's your friend Wales! What a spectacle that Prince in petticoats makes of himself with all the title-tattle of London—and he moved on Mary Anderson with the society diplomacy he could command. But Mary forgot not the eagle of her land, and the lion roar of her land, and the wondrous doudle mouth. Poor Prince—some day he will be a king!

A newspaper in a distant city tells of the death under painful and mortifying circumstances of a young girl whom I have seen among the gayest of the gay at the opera and the race—well-born, highly educated, a lovely girl, daughter of one of our best men, who became entangled in his affairs. She was in the best circle. I need not tell the whole sad story. She left a letter in which she took much of the blame upon herself, and was otherwise full of a desire for rich dress. She was away among strangers, no loving hand to press her in the last and parting. "The wages of sin is death." God strengthen the weak!

Has Anybody Told You—

That Will Travis, Bill Williams, Billy Fagot, and John Haberdill and Barney Shanley, Porter Smith and Luke Stephens all have their eyes fixed on the nomination for City Sergeant from the Republican and Democratic parties respectively?

That of the above list will be the one to get 'thar' first?
That since this cold snap set in, the city 's not up to the average?
It doesn't do to drive out of a walk line for sale here, in letters not less than four inches long, on the ne. 'll be arrested and fined $5 and costs?
That Uncle Bobby 's, will not settle our difficulty with hard go 's?
That the rumor that another 'dally wedding was in the near future is o.

That the newspaper syndicate seems to have been nipped by the frost?
That Katharine Rogers went away with lots of grief and little money?
That the gentlemen who brought Dan Dougherty here made up the loss out of their own pockets, so that it didn't cost the society a copper?
That a Wheeling brave has been looking for a challenge from Mahone?
That Auditor Miller may surprise somebody in the coming convention?
That home jewelers report a brisk demand for diamonds?
That Commissioner Stein and his baby have made some of the County Commissioners very uncomfortable?
That some railroad promoters have forgotten how to tell the truth?
That the Bazaar will be abuzz with beauty and that sort of thing?
That His Honor the Mayor will do a tight-rope act?
That His Excellency the Governor will swing on the flying trap?

WOMAN'S REIN.

Miss Julia Jackson, daughter of General Stone, will make her debut in the Southern society this winter. She is beautiful and accomplished.
It is estimated that there are 320,000 young women in England engaged in business.
The wife of Congressman Lowry, of Indiana, tried to cure a felon on her finger with carbolic acid. Amputation is thought to be necessary.
A lady in Cathlamet, Ky., has a picture of Abraham Lincoln woven in black and white silk, which was made in Lyons, France, at a cost of $300.
A Mrs. Flanagan is under arrest at Liverpool upon the charge of murdering six persons, her husband among the number, all of whose lives she had insured for handsome amounts.
"Ma," said Miss Parvett, "Jennie Jones has been presented at Court." "That's nothing," replied Ma. "Why, I was in court two whole weeks when my sister was getting her divorce. We are just as good as the Joneses."

Twenty-seven girls of Council Bluffs, by way of reminding their male friends of their remembrance in the matter of taking them to entertainments, bought seals for the theatre one evening and went in a body, with only a matron for escort.
Mrs. Kalakaua, wife of the King of the Sandwich Islands, is about 47 years of age, and is a devoted Episcopalian and bears the name of Emma. She has no children of her own, but has adopted several.
At a recent meeting of the Paris Society of Anthropology, M. Manouvrier summarized his observations on the relative form of the brain and the two sexes. He has been led to the conclusion, from experimental researches, that a general relation exists between the proportional weight and form of the brain and the sex. Contrary to the opinion that the relative weight of the brain is much greater in the female sex.

A remedy that has proven itself a never-failing cure for scrofula and all syphilitic ailments, much quicker cure less terrible diseases. Dr. Guyot's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla is such a perfect blood purifier and strengthener of bodily functions, that it cures the above diseases even when Hot Springs and all other treatment has failed. Remember, that it is absolutely free from mineral poisons, and will not injure the most delicate constitution. It will make you feel buoyant, strong and well, and will rid your system of all blood impurities and every internal and external indication of disease.

Influence of the Soil on Health.
The influence of the soil on the health of those living upon it, is brought out very plainly during the prevalence of epidemic diseases. That malarial diseases (like intermittent fever) originate from the soil, is already accepted; and recent investigations show pretty conclusively that the germs of Cholera, Abdominal Typhus, Yellow Fever, and the plague are in some way connected with the soil, which is daily corroborated by the marvelous effect of Perma on those diseases, and in their convalescence. John E. Couner, of Couner & Son, Pittsburg, Pa., getting better, thanks to your Perma. See page 24 in "Life of Life." DAW
